[22/01/17][23:09:05] -

Title: Mortiok's Curse

Author:

The tales of
trapped souls...
takes an
interesting turn with Mortiock...Legendsay
of an evil wizard,
equal in strength of Mondain, that saw his death in his dreams.
Preparing for the
worst he cast a spell
that would upon his death transfer his
soul into a item of pure enchantment. It would be some time
before Mortiock
dream would come true . A hero who's name is lost among
time fought the
wizard and it did look
ill for the hero indeed for Mortiock was powerful. In the end
though it was the
hero that slew Mortiock. Before the wizard died he
muttered the words of
power that would
transfer his soul into
the enchanted item.
The item was the very
sword that the hero
was carrying. The very item that slayed
the wizard would host
his soul for centuries

to come until released.
It was the sword that
the hero used until his death not knowing
he carried Mortiock himself. See whoever finds and uses the
sword is to become
dammed and black as
heart as Mortiock
was. Also if the person ever uses the
sword in anger and
strikes another
person, should he
survive the blow, he
will also become damned for all time to come only to follow the
wielder of the sword.
 There is a plus, in
my work I have come
across tales of a cure,
a staff that would if used within a day's time of the initial infection of the
person cure him of Mortiock's Curse.
There is but one
problem it is
said
 the staff lay safely
quad deep on the bottom ⊂=oor, in the
hell hole of Hythloth
... demons standing
over the locked chest
protecting its key ...
presenting a challenge
thus far not overcome... I feel
what I seek may here
be near... but who can say until I look..until then it can only be
said this is a legend.
Fraggle